CAMRA coined the term 'Real Ale' to describe beer brewed from traditional ingredients – malted barley hops and yeast – kept in casks which allow it to continue 'working' in the pub cellar and dispensed by any method that does not involve the beer being kept in contact with carbon dioxide.

HOW TO USE THE GUIDE

AREAS

For the purpose of this guide Greater London has been divided into seven sectors: CENTRAL LONDON, EAST, NORTH, NORTH WEST, SOUTH EAST, SOUTH WEST and WEST. The boundaries of these sectors and the districts within them are illustrated on the Greater London map on pages 10 to 11.

Under each district the pubs are arranged alphabetically with entries giving the address, details of the real beer sold and the facilities offered.

HOURS

Permitted hours on Sundays are 12 noon to 2 pm and 7 pm to 10.30 pm for all London pubs; all are also permitted to open until 11 pm on Friday and Saturday evenings. Permitted hours for the remainder of the week in each area are given under the area title.

Where an individual pub's hours are known to differ from this it is mentioned in the entry for that pub. It may be worth noting, however, that several pubs delay Saturday evening opening and that some, particularly in Central London, do not open at all at the weekend.

BEERS

A list of the real draught beers sold appears under each pub entry, details of these beers are provided under 'Brewers' on pages 6 to 9. The name of each beer is followed by a letter indicating the method of dispense mainly by handpump (H), occasionally by electric pump (E) or direct from the cask under gravity (G). Note that cask conditioned beers dispensed by air pressure pump or under CO₂ pressure are not included.

LATE ENTRIES

During the course of preparation of the guide, a number of new real ale outlets have come to light. Most of them have been included within the main body of the guide and on the relevant maps. It has not however always been possible to include a full list of facilities. Very late additions will be found under 'Late Entries' on p. 138. Information about new real ale pubs and changes to existing pubs is published in CAMRA London's monthly magazine, 'London Drinker', available in pubs throughout Greater London.

HOW TO USE THE MAPS

Over half the pubs listed in the guide are located on the 46 detailed maps.

Maps 1 to 14 cover the central parts of London (see Key map, pages 12-13). These maps cover all the postal districts included in the Central London sector of the guide (i.e. W1, WC1, WC2, EC1, EC2, EC3 and EC4), together with the innermost parts of surrounding sectors as follows: parts of E1 and E2 in East London, parts of N1 in North London, parts of NW1, NW6 and NW8 in North West London, parts of SE1, SE11 and SE17 in South East London, the whole of SW1, SW3, SW7 and parts of SW5, SW6, SW8, and SW10 in South West London, the whole of W2 and parts of W8, W9 and W11 in West London. The pubs located on Maps 1 to 14 are numbered in one numerical sequence in order of appearance in the guide.

Maps 15 to 46 cover 30 inner and outer London districts where concentrations of real ale pubs are to be found. These maps are included in the guide as close as possible to the relevant pub entries, and may sometimes include pubs from more than one postal district or area. Pubs located on Maps 15 to 46 are also numbered in order of appearance in the guide, but each map has a separate numerical sequence starting from number 1.

Map and pub numbers appear for each entry immediately to the right of the pub name.

ANTELOPE Map No.
9-53 Pub No.

To find a pub on a map, first locate the map using the first part of the number (the map number), and then locate the pub by finding the second part of the number (the pub number), on the map. Postal district boundaries are also shown (where applicable) which will help to limit the area of search. To locate a pub entry from the maps, refer to the particular postal district or Outer London district in which the pub falls. Note that some late entries have numbers with A or B suffixes.

LONDON DRINKER.

CAMRA

When in 1971 four disgruntled Mancunians got together to form "The Campaign for the Revitalisation of Ale", few of their friends, let alone the drinking public, the media and the brewers, could have imagined they were witnessing the birth of an effective consumer lobby. And yet the very improbability of it, the singularly British idea of forming a serious organisation to end the abuse of that much-loved, but in the last analysis patently silly, institution, the pint, was to be the movement's strength. Now CAMRA and real beer are household words and the campaign notches up successes every day.

In 1971 it seemed as if the organisation of the brewing industry was such that to achieve lasting changes was close on impossible, and dozens of brewers still appeared doomed to merger or closure. CAMRA's influence has not prevented several such disasters from taking place, but there is ample evidence to suggest that many brewers took heart: and a market really did exist for their old-fashioned products. Major brewers have also come to realise that their centralise-and-rationalise plans were based largely on myths like cheap fuel and ever-increasing sales.

CAMRA's central policy remains the end of "Big Six" domination of the industry and the reform of the tied house system so as to introduce an element of free choice for licensees and customers alike. We believe strongly that market forces will enable the drinker to have the beer of his choice; regrettably, the licensing system (desirable as it may be in the social sense) has made the market finite, and brought about concentration of ownership. When six brewers control 80% of the market it is inevitably distorted and can be run however they like. CAMRA will continue to work for a genuinely competitive industry in which the consumer and not the producer will be sovereign.

Notwithstanding these difficulties we have scored many successes in our first ten years. More than half the pubs in the country offer at least one cask-conditioned beer. Brewers large and small have reintroduced traditional brands, and increasingly the Big Six are realising the benefits derived from smaller-sized subsidiary companies. Regional firms have been expanding by take-over but mostly have the sense to realise the benefits of keeping their acquisitions separate from the parent.

An astonishing development has been the growth of the new small brewers, varying from "home-brew" pubs to ambitious wholesale concerns, numbering over fifty in the last ten years. Their success indicates the possibilities for consumer choice if every brewery tenant were able to stock one non-tied beer of his choice.

Areas in which CAMRA has become active are licensing law and pub preservation. We support flexibility of drinking hours, and have high hopes England may soon follow Scotland's enlightened example.

The Campaign is now accepted as one of Britain's foremost consumer and conservation bodies. Its views on a wide range of subjects connected with the brewing industry and the licensed trade are taken seriously by the industry itself and by the Government. CAMRA's growing concern with a whole range of legal and technical issues - with pricing policies, brewing technology, monopolies, the licensing laws and consumer protection reflect a mountain of effort by unpaid individuals.

HOW IS CAMRA RUN?

CAMRA is not sponsored by any brewery and neither does any brewery belong to CAMRA. However, individuals in most breweries who share the Campaign's views are members.

A small full time staff administers the every day running of the campaign, and produces the national publications. CAMRA is otherwise run entirely by volunteers and is dependent on subscriptions to protect and promote real beer.

Thriving small independent breweries brewing real beer, and the trend amongst larger brewers to produce real beer's bear witness to CAMRA's success.

The Campaign is the only effective mouthpiece for millions of drinkers and its effect on brewers and the beer you drink is acknowledged. Should you not have a voice in deciding its actions?

TEN YEARS ON

A NEW LONDON

From the number of pubs and choice of beer included in this guide it is clear that London has undergone a complete transformation from those days a few years ago when the prospect of drinking in London offered little joy.

At its lowest ebb London could boast only a few hundred real beer pubs, the bulk being supplied by Charrington. Most of the remainder were Young's houses, but even they had two pubs serving beer by top pressure. Fullers, London's other independent brewer had only seven real beer pubs! And that, plus a few Free Houses and the odd McMullen or Greene King pub, was it.

Whilst today's mind-boggling choice (which is in no small part due to the activities of CAMRA) is provided by a seemingly endless list of brewers, pleased to supply beer for the Free Houses and their mushrooming handpumps, it is CAMRA's influence on the change in attitude by the major brewers which gives the guide its depth. It is they, after all, who control the majority of London's pubs and who for years deprived the drinker of any real choice.

CAMRA's influence, however, has achieved more than just the growth of handpumps. Many of those brewers who spent two decades creating corporate images and standard identities now strive to destroy them. The Watney and Ind Coope groups have attempted to lose the anonymity of the large company by breaking themselves down into smaller trading units, said to be autonomous in their own areas, having control of marketing strategy and beer production.

A change in policy has also brought a change in paint for the pubs, Watney's using every colour but red! Ind Coope have adopted the colours and names of breweries long since defunct having been taken over by an Ind Coope of a different era. All this plus Whitbread's policy of using the Wethered's and Fremlin's names, Charrington with a few handpumps reappearing after years of little improvement. Courage reintroducing handpumps despite closure of the Horsleydown brewery, the sprinkling of home-brew pubs and others offering 'own beers' brewed by one of the new small breweries could give the impression of having crossed a time warp to anyone glancing at some of London's pubs. Yet whilst others strive to recreate the past, Youngs of Wandsworth celebrate their 150th anniversary with all their pubs selling real beer.

Our congratulations go to them, but let us hope that it does not take 150 years for the others to follow suit.

A NEW PRICE

As this guide covers all real beer pubs in Greater London it will include both the expensive and inexpensive; as the drinker using this guide will soon discover.

Some pubs can justify their prices by the facilities offered, but this will not always be the case. If we are to have any influence on beer prices, then brewers and landlords must see that pubs giving good value are busy while the over-priced ones are empty. The question of price is therefore one in which the drinker can have a say if he is prepared to comment with his feet and walk past these expensive establishments.

A NEW THREAT

It may be the many intimate bars of the Victorian local which attract you, it may be the Space Invasion, the Paddle Steamer theme, the 50's Juke Box, the exhibition of ales from exotic places, the upstairs room where the pigeon fanciers gather, or simply a quiet refuge from the hurly burly of city life.

The variety of pubs in London is endless. However, as we sit back admiring our pubs and congratulating ourselves on these unique establishments, the Traffic Engineer down the road may be drawing up his plans for the new eight lane highway and programming the demolition of your local. The Brewery Design Team may be flicking through the catalogue, putting the final touches to the working drawing for the new interior to your local, gone for ever are the Victorian glass panels and the public bar.

In the past twenty years London has lost hundreds of pubs and hundreds more have been altered out of all recognition. Remember the Watney's Red Revolution? Not one of their pubs was safe from the corporate image, many lovely old features and facias were grotesquely obliterated. Fortunately there are few of these follies left - Watneys have in more recent years been treating their tied estate with discretion, individuality has reappeared.

Cosmetic changes may or may not be to our individual tastes, but the total loss of a pub is infinitely more distressing. If the road schemes planned for the Greater London area go ahead we will be without many more of our pubs, with few plans for their replacement. Its commonplace to see a pub come down but rare to see a new one erected.

Antisocial plans can be combatted, whether the threat is in the form of the bulldozer, or the Pub Designers planning to rationalise the public bar. PUB PRESERVATION is an important activity within CAMRA. If you care about the future of your pub, join us in the fight to preserve it.

BREWERS

The availability and choice of real ale in London pubs continues to increase. There are now 61 breweries supplying a total of 128 different real beers to London drinkers, and just over 40% of the 5,500 pubs in Greater London now sell at least one cask conditioned real beer.

The Big Six brewers, who between them control almost 90% of London pubs are steadily becoming more committed to real ale. The Allied Lyons group, better known in London as Ind Coope, has recently substantially increased the choice and availability of real beers in its pubs as part of its decentralisation policy. The Grand Metropolitan subsidiaries Watneys and Trumans have finally abandoned their policy of using air pressure dispense methods for their cask conditioned beers. Whitbread and Scottish and Newcastle (Youngers) are increasing their range of real beers imported into London. Bass (Charrington) and Courage are slowly extending the availability of their real beers.

Of the two major London-independent brewers, Youngs have long been committed to the real ale cause and 100% of their pubs serve the real thing. Fullers are gradually introducing handpumps to serve their cask conditioned beers although sadly 45% of their pubs in Greater London still use a pressurised form of dispense. Both Youngs and Fullers are increasing their tied estate in London, mainly by acquiring pubs disposed of by the Big Six. They have been joined of late by independent brewers from outside London such as Shepherd Neame from Kent, Samuel Smith from Yorkshire, Greene King and Charles Wells from Bedfordshire and Tolly Cobbold from Suffolk. All the above brewers, and many others, are actively pursuing the London free trade and the number of 'beer exhibition' free houses continues to grow albeit sometimes with scant regard to quality control, and with beer at premium prices.

Most encouraging of all has been the growth of the new small breweries and home brew pubs. The first new brewery in London for 50 years, Godsons, started brewing in 1977 and has now become well established in the free trade. The closure of the Courage London brewery early in 1981 has resulted in the opening of two small breweries, Chudleys and Tower Brewery, both run by former Courage employees. Alongside these there are the home brew pubs Bruces, Brewpubs, Eaves and the brewery at the Two Brewers off licence in N1.

Traditional draught cider brewed from natural ingredients and served without gas pressure is currently making a welcome appearance in London pubs. Traditional cider is generally served direct from the cask although in some cases handpumps are being installed. Traditional ciders are included in the guide but are only listed for those pubs that also serve real beer.

The brewers and beers available in London are listed below. The figure following the name of the beer refers to its original gravity which is an indication of its strength. Mild ales and light bitters tend to be in the range 1030-35, bitters 1036-40, strong bitters 1040-50 and up to 1060 and beyond for extra strong old ales, winter brews and barley wines.

ALLIED

Allied Lyons own 800 pubs in Greater London of which 80% are currently supplied with real beer. Until recently all Allied pubs in London traded under the Ind Coope name, but in common with Allied decentralisation policy throughout the country, Greater London is now covered by four semi-autonomous trading units. Three of these companies have taken the names of former breweries absorbed in the fifties and sixties, the fourth has retained the Ind Coope name. Pubs are gradually being repainted in the liveries of these former brewers and new real beers have been introduced, one for each company.

Benskins, Friary Meux and Taylor Walker bitters are brewed at the Romford brewery, whereas Ind Coope bitter found in houses retaining the Ind Coope name is now brewed at Burton-upon-Trent. The stronger Burton Ale, also brewed at Burton, is available alongside the new bitters throughout the group generally.

WATNEY, MANN and TRUMAN

A subsidiary of Grand Metropolitan, pubs held by this group in Greater London are under either Watney or Truman control. The two companies act independently of one another. Watneys have around 1,250 pubs of which only 6% serve real beer by handpump or electric pump. Trumans have 400 pubs of which 20% serve real beer by handpump or electric pump. Watneys brew two traditional beers at Mortlake and a few pubs also take traditional beers brewed at Norwich. Trumans brew Tap Bitter at their Brick Lane brewery and are currently introducing a new Best Bitter, available so far only in a handful of outlets.

Both companies have until recently pursued a policy of utilising a dispense system involving air pressure for their traditional beers. The DCL air pressure pump mountings look similar to proper handpumps. Pubs using this system have been excluded from this guide, since in the opinion of CAMRA London branches their use can impair the flavour of the beers.

The companies have now changed their policy in favour of proper handpumps for all new installations.

Their tied estate has been extended into the London area by the purchase of free houses particularly those formerly owned by the Henekey group. These pubs now offer the brewery's only real beer at a premium price. A total of 9 pubs are currently owned in Greater London, soon to increase to 10 with the re-opening of a pub off Oxford Street, W1.

Traditional Beers from Watneys.

London Bitter, a draught beer brewed the traditional way has a full, firm flavour yet is not too heady and is ideal for lunch-time and evening enjoyment.

London Bitter. Brewed at Mortlake Brewery, where traditionally beer has been brewed since the 15th century.

Stag Bitter, the stronger sister beer to London Bitter already established as a great favourite with beer drinkers around town.

London and Stag are both beers for the experienced palate.
 They are unfiltered and fined in the traditional manner giving a bright, round and clear flavour - whatever your choice.

Now, so you can be more choosy about what you drink and where, we've produced a Watneys Traditional Beer Drinker's Guide. It shows the latest list of where you can get

Send to: The Pub Information Centre,
